GUIDE TO USING THE ASTROQUEST ORACLE:

While reading this report, keep in mind the nature of your question. You may want to make a note of your question on the front page of the report.

The first section of the report is "Descriptions of General Situation" and is very important. If indications in this section are negative, it is likely that the final outcome of your question will be negative even if other sections have positive indications. The next section is a "Description of You, the Querent", also a very important section. Interpretations with exclamation points are particularly important, and may give information about other individuals or circumstances that may be relevant to your question. The third section is a "Description of the Queried Object or Person" and you should pay particular attention to statements that relate directly to your question. For example, if your question is about a long trip you are going to make and one of the statements discusses long journeys, then this statement is particularly powerful for you. Statements about subjects that are very unrelated to your question are less important. The next section is a "Description of Other Special Characters or Situations" and, again, you should pay particular attention to subjects that relate directly to the issues and things that are in your question. The final sections describe forthcoming events and constitute the most important final analysis of your question of all! The event interpretations are roughly arranged in order of occurrence; the earlier the event is forecast to occur, the more likely it is to occur in a manner favorable to you.

Have fun with the Astroquest Oracle and remember that although it can be amazingly accurate, it is for entertainment, spiritual development and research purposes only. It is no substitute for common sense, good life strategy, positive spiritual intent and prayer/meditation. It is also no substitute for an in-depth evaluation by a qualified horary astrology practitioner. Remember too that you MUST use the exact time and place of the VERY FIRST arising or receiving of a question, although a few minutes of time inaccuracy one way or the other will usually still yield a useful interpretation when you do not know the EXACT time of the first arising of a question. A first meeting, first date, signing of a contract, receipt of a telephone call or opening of a letter, or the very first occurrence of a particular event are all suitable times for horary analysis, for the question is implied in the event itself. It is also possible to use the time and place that a question becomes very urgent, important, or critical to you, but there usually is an event that has occurred that triggers the question. Frivolous or impertinent questions likewise yield no useful information. It usually does no good to ask a question that has already been asked before, by yourself or anyone else. One temptation is to ask the question again and produce another one of these reports either in hopes of gaining greater clarification or in hopes of getting different information. This will not work! If you use a valid date and time and you read this report carefully, you should obtain a great deal of useful information.
